SILENCING THE JINGO.

It was an army of peace that marched last night in the gorgeous Japanese lantern parade. The Oriental picturesqueness of this parade did not overshadow its significance as an event in honor of the first American president. The Japanese, in a striking manner yielded not the homage of subjects but the respect and veneration of citizens to a great American.

Such a parade confounds the jingo and silences the alarmist. Those thousands of Japanese boys and girls, born in Hawaii and growing up as citizens, each year see their most elaborate public activity devoted to an American patriotic occasion. The schools are teaching them to salute the American flag until it becomes instinct. They are learning that the Rising Sun of Dai Nippon and the Stars and Stripes of the United States may float side by side, with the American colors first in any matter of precedence upon Uncle Sam's soil. That precedence was given last night.

TWENTY-EIGHT MADE GOOD—TWO DID NOT.

Out of thirty inmates of the territorial prison given the freedom of the city yesterday, only two returned to jail after the hour set for their appearance and in only one case was the privilege grossly abused. That was in the case of the notorious "Bert" Bower.

The exception proves the rule in this as in other matters. The honor system instituted, encouraged and splendidly developed by High Sheriff Jarrett is working out successfully, despite isolated instances in which prisoners do not keep faith with their officials. Of course there will be criticism of the high sheriff for allowing prisoners to leave the jail and come into the city to watch the parades, but the twenty-eight men who returned to their enforced detention at the time appointed—returned decent and sober—are better for the freedom they were given and the self-control they exercised. The two who did not keep faith are probably no worse than they were before, and in addition, they have the knowledge that their fellow-prisoners condemn and resent the abuse of the honor system. They should do better in the future.

GERMANY'S SUGAR OUTLOOK.

Rather meager news despatches from Germany for months past have hinted at an unsatisfactory sugar-beet outlook. Recently an Associated Press correspondent made an investigation in Berlin with the result that he found a probable shortage in prospect.

An increase in the maximum wholesale price of sugar beets from 35 pfennigs per hundred weight to 1.35 or even 1.50 is held to be necessary if production is to be encouraged sufficiently to insure a normal crop in 1916. Representatives of the sugar industry, and of agriculture in general, gathered recently in the ministry of the interior to discuss the sugar beet problem. According to the best obtainable estimates, the 1916 sugar production from the beet crop will total only 30 million hundred-weight, as against a normal production of from 50 to 55 hundred-weight.

The reason for the decreased production lies primarily in the high price of grain. Farmers find it more profitable to plant their farms to wheat than to beets because the wheat brings them higher prices. Therefore, if beets are to be grown again, the price for them must be increased. Many of the sugar representatives pleaded for a maximum price at 1.60 marks or even 2 marks per hundred-weight. It was pointed out that the cost of labor has greatly increased and that many other fixed charges that enter into the production of sugar from beets have gone up. The majority of those present at the meeting, however, agreed that a maximum price of 1.50 was sufficient to induce increased planting of sugar beets, to a point whereby about 40 million hundred-weight would be raised in all probability. This new price, it is proposed, will become effective September 1, 1916, or before the crop is harvested. The 40 million hundred-weight it is believed will be amply sufficient for all of Germany's needs.

The proposed increase in the price of sugar

TINY BIT OF OPIUM IN CLOTHES PROLONGS HOY'S VISIT TO OAHU PRISON

Taking with him a small package of opium, carefully hidden in his nether garments, Ah Hoy, a local Chinese, went out to Oahu prison last week for a visit with his friend, Leong Wat. Ah Hoy probably never dreamed that the visit would last long, but as a matter of fact it ended only this morning. Ah Hoy had to put up $750 as a binder to the promise that he would not go away far when the release was granted this morning. When the Chinese applied for admission to visit his friend last week,

Capt. N. T. Nielsen, deputy warden, had him carefully searched, finding upon him, it is said, the package of concentrated poppy juice. Nielsen called up Federal Marshal J. J. Smiddy by telephone and got the orders to hold Ah Hoy. Arrangements for release were not satisfactorily made until this morning when the Chinese was let out on $750 bonds.

beets will cause a corresponding increase in the price of raw sugar. It now is controlled by a maximum price of 12 marks per hundred-weight, and will go up to at least 15 marks.

BELLIGERENTS AND THE VATICAN.

Frequent references to exchanges of views between various Powers and the Vatican emphasize the numerous efforts to build up friendly relations, made by one side or the other. It is difficult to believe that the belligerents are not seeking temporal advantages through these channels.

Not since the fall of the temporal power of the Pope some forty-six years ago have there been so many attempts of hitherto indifferent countries to reestablish diplomatic relations by the sending of ministers to the Vatican, in addition to those already accredited to the government of Italy at the Quirinal.

Great Britain and Holland have renewed diplomatic relation by sending ministers to the Vatican, while France is thought to be represented through the Principality of Monaco, which is the latest to renew old relations. Of course since the entrance of Italy into the war, the Austrian ambassador to the Vatican has left, as well as the ministers from Prussia and Bavaria, respectively the Baron von Ritter and the Baron von Muhlberg.

While these countries just named did not in any sense break their relations with the Vatican and perhaps even now try to keep in better connection than ever, it was impossible for them to remain openly, due to the peculiar position of the Holy See.

Great Britain has never had a permanent representative to the Vatican until the recent coming of Sir John Howard, formerly British minister to the Hague, England having in past times appointed special agents to deal with the special religious questions affecting her Catholic populations.

COL. ROOSEVELT AND THE ARMY.

Col. Roosevelt's recent utterances have given the impression in some quarters that he is in favor of a very large standing army, but in one speech a few days ago he told just where he stands in this regard. It was before a Brooklyn audience. He said:

"The professional or so-called regular army should be large enough to meet any sudden emergency, such for example, as restoring civilization in Mexico, or meeting a sudden assault from overseas by any power which desired to seize New York or San Francisco and treat us as Belgium."

"We should have a mobile army of 150,000 men, adequately to meet these needs, which means a total regular army of about a quarter of a million men."

Of the proposed continental army the colonel spoke in terms of biting sarcasm. He likened it to a project to arm Uncle Sam with a .22 caliber muzzle loader when he needed an automatic .45.

"The men who advocate the so-called continental army," said he, "are the real enemies of true preparedness."

The very artistic floats entered by the Outdoor Circle and neighborhood sections yesterday were vivid tributes to energy and enterprise as well as good taste. The decoration of these floats represented a great deal of detailed work and cooperation on the part of the Outdoor Circle members.

That splendid Military Parade yesterday morning stands out as the Carnival feature with the real thrill—and, if necessary, it can deliver the real "punch."

King Constantine appears to be getting reconciled to a "benevolent alliance" with the Entente Powers.

Not so long ago somebody called the International Harvester Company "the good trust." And now—

Having put the ban on vodka, what will the Russians do with the rum in Erzerum?

King Carnival certainly did a good day's work yesterday.

LITTLE INTERVIEWS

JOHN C. ANDERSON: In spite of all that is being done for the boys at the industrial school at Wailalee, some of them run away.

CHESTER A. DOYLE: I'm glad to get back to Honolulu, and I am especially glad that I am back in town in time to see the Carnival.

JUDGE SAMUEL B. KEMP: I wouldn't be a bit surprised if I was appointed assistant district attorney here. However, before coming here I made no arrangements to take the position.

W. W. THAYER, territorial secretary: This is the biggest and best Carnival we have ever had. I believe it is getting better every year. The men who planned and carried out the events this week deserve a great deal of credit.

JAMES A. DUNBAR, chairman Ball of All Nations: Many thanks, Sgt. F. Frazier, for perfect and smooth-running ushering. Also, many thanks, Jack D. Cleary, for yeoman service in the national dances. But what about the Boy Scouts? Jimmy Wilder and Captain Hayward, hats off to you!

J. H. FISHER: The way tourists have to hunt for a place to sleep is a shame. I do not see why the small merchants, who are most benefited by the tourist trade, do not form a stock company and erect a big hotel a little ways from the downtown section. There is no doubt that it could be made a paying proposition.

GOVERNOR LUCIUS E. PINKHAM: I've got a scheme I'm working on and when I have it ready I am going to make a speech about it. If I told the public my plans before they were complete I would have half a dozen hecklers picking them to pieces and I would never get anything done. Then, too, a great deal depends on the federal government's action. Time enough to show how the territory can pay the guard when it has to be done.

J. H. FISHER, territorial auditor: I've had bad luck this week. I've got two season tickets for the Carnival and I've only used one of them once. I have viewed most of the events on invitation and the one where I did have to have tickets cost me $3 Monday night. I sat on the Palace balcony and viewed the ball of all nations. Then I went over to the masked ball in the armory and found I had left my season tickets at home. I bought three tickets and paid for them.

THOUGHT SCRUBWOMEN HAD LOCKED HIM UP IN THEATER'S ATTIC

W. D. Adams, manager of the Opera House, was locked in a tiny attic of the theater with a party of friends yesterday at noon, and it looked for a while as if they would have to stay there and rest themselves for an hour or so.

The party went through the attic to view the parades from a gallery over the entrance to the Opera House. Adams forgot to tell the scrubwomen working around the balconies that he was out on the gallery, and one of them locked the door leading into the attic from the outside.

Members of the party kicked and pounded on the door for several minutes before it occurred to one of them that there was a door on the opposite side. This opened easily and a somewhat excited lot of people crowded out of it.

land in the Wilhelmina this morning. About 20 members of the company were booked as steerage passengers in the same steamer.

MRS. L. E. DAVIS, who was booked to leave for the mainland on the Great Northern on Saturday, received a cablegram this morning which made it impossible for her to go now, so her booking has been canceled.

HARRY GESNER, formerly agent here for the Overland automobile and now distributing that car on Maui, is here for the Carnival. Mrs. Gesner recently came from her home in Modesto, Cal., to join her husband. Gesner is well pleased with Maui.

CHARLES A. STANTON, former real estate man of this city and later of San Francisco, left on the Wilhelmina this morning after a visit of several weeks here. He intimates that he will return before long and perhaps a deal of unusual interest may then be announced.

J. F. HUMBURG, manager of the San Francisco branch and vice-president of H. Hackfeld & Co., Ltd., arrived on the Matson steamer Mapoa yesterday morning to see the Carnival. He was met by his brother, August Humburg; Georg Rodiek, F. W. Klebahn, H. P. F. Schultze and other officials of Hackfeld's.
